

THE PROJECT

The Borrowers is the realisation of a design competition won by Y5 MSA students earlier this year. The competition attempts to argue that we are capable of creating our own architecture from using objects they may seem as junk or unused.

The design strategy follows the QED atelier agenda, as we aim to up cycle materials and create an environment where the users are proactive instead of passive users, as seen in the everyday office.

With a prize fund of £2000 to help get the idea off the ground, our event month will see the real design and build the prototype office environment. We set to define a new personalised office space created using the users reclaimed objects.

ROLE + BENEFIT

This is your opportunity to work with us to help curate this exhibition space. You will get the benefit to engage with real clients and interact with local suppliers, as we attempt to create reactive architecture that can transform how the office environment is used and understood. With our sponsors giving us their full support and contacts, we are confident that this event will be publicised with local newspaper MEN as well as BBC covering the event.

CLIENT

Bruntwoods, Manchester's huge family-run property company. The prototype will be displayed in one of their offices and is to be curated using their clients objects.
