Agenda

[Flux]ilion is a term derived from the state of urban flux present in any given village, town or city, in conjunction with a small scale structure or pavilion. This event seeks to analyse the locality of Alexandra Park in Manchester, mapping it's context and connectivity to local urban histories with the aid of digital and physical mapping methodologies. The results from these findings will form a basis for the evolution of a pavilion form and exhibition space to house the finale and closing ceremony of the spring arts festival.

[PAVILION]

A building, form, or similar micro scale structure used for a specific purpose or program.

Production

The design and installation of a small scale intervention on site, within the Alexandra Park Pavilion, derived from contextual physical and digital mappings of the locality. The processes and outputs from both the initial research and mapping stage, through to the manufacture and construction of the exhibition will be documented for inclusion in the students portfolios and an event blog.
