AGENDA

It is easy to recognise the physical presence of post-war infrastructure with its Brutalist form, but do we consider the social, political, and environmental context it sits within? "Power Trip" will tell the stories of these power stations and coal mines in a virtual day-out for school children. School trips have been a restricted educational tool in the COVID-19 pandemic, so we will create a website that highlights these infrastructures in an engaging and child-friendly way. Content will be curated to form a future physical exhibition at the National Coal Mining Museum

SKILLS

Contribute to the understanding of a key moment of built environment history, participate in a collaboration between architects, landscape architects and engineers, and learn skills including:

- Website building
- Exhibition curation
- Heritage research
- Photoshop, InDesign and 3D modelling
- Video creation.
